

Cayce Colby Jones

February 26, 1997 - January 3, 2026

Today, we honor Cayce Colby Jones, the youngest of three brothers, the baby of his family, and in so many ways, the brightest light among us. Cayce came into this world with an open heart. He carried a joy that didn't ask permission. It simply arrived, filled the room, and stayed wherever he went; laughter followed. You felt it in the sense that everything was going to be okay. He was a fisherman, not just by passion, but by spirit. Cayce understood patience. He knew how to sit with the quiet, how to wait without rushing, how to appreciate the rhythm of the water, and the peace it brought. The sea gave him calm, and in return, he gave the world gentleness. As the youngest, Cayce held a special place. He was protective, teased, and adored, but he also gave back in his own way. He reminded his brothers, his family, and all of us how to see life simply. How to smile easily. How to love without conditions. What stands out most about Cayce was this: He was never angry. Not because life didn't challenge him, but because he chose kindness. He met people with grace. He welcomed everyone as they were. His heart didn't know how to close itself off. Cayce loved fully, laughed freely, and softly in a world that often isn't, and that is a rare thing and beautiful thing. Though his time with us feels far too short, his presence was complete. He gave us memories filled with light, moments of joy. We will carry forever. When we think of Cayce, think of calm waters, open skies, and a smile that could lift a burden. He may no longer stand among us, but his spirit remains in every ripple of water, every shared laugh, every room that feels a little brighter for having him. Rest easy, Cayce. You were deeply loved, and you always will be.
