“ My first memory of you is meeting you downtown on a Friday night on the “cruise strip”. I was very shy and you just came right up and introduced yourself in the Herfey’s parking lot. I’ve run into you over the years and you always had a bright smile and a kind word. Eric, I’m so sorry for your loss. When I saw you a few weeks ago, you were struggling to hold it together and I gave you a hug before I left the store. Remember all the good times and know that eventually, it does get easier to breath. Thinking of you all as you adjust to this new reality.
